WASHINGTONIAN MAGAZINE CHOOSES TWO FINANCIAL EXPERTS FROM TMG The Monitor Group's Kautt and Brown among the best in Washington DC

McLean, VA (January 5, 2009). For the first time in The Monitor Group's history, two of its professionals have been selected simultaneously for Washingtonian magazine's list of local top financial experts. In the February edition, the magazine names both Glenn Kautt CFP[®], EA, AIFA and Cal Brown CFP[®], MST as two of the area's 33 top financial planners.

Washingtonian's list is respected by the financial community for several reasons; among them is the magazine's importance in the Washington, DC metro area. The criteria for inclusion on the list also sets it apart. Washingtonian's Deborah Knuckey writes, "These money experts are recognized by their peers as among the best in the area ... (We) surveyed hundreds of financial experts asking: 'Whom would you trust with your own money?' ... The people listed received the most recommendations."

Knuckey describes the context of this year's list, "For all of Adam Smith's theories about an invisible hand guiding a rational market, every few years ... it seems that the hand enjoys throwing the dice and watching investors scramble ... The one certain thing in uncertain times is that having a good financial adviser – or team of experts – can help." TMG's Brown responds, "While it's impossible to accurately predict the day-to-day movement of the market, we have confidence in our ability to structure portfolios that will grow in the long run." TMG provides all aspects of wealth management and works closely with clients to ease their financial fears. "To be selected for this list is an honor, but inclusion in this particular financial season is a mark of distinction that makes us very proud," comments TMG's Kautt.
